

CILT within the European Logistics Association

ELA aims to increase the awareness of the relevance of Logistics and Supply Chain Management for the competitiveness of businesses in all industries.

ELA sees logistics and transportation across the Community as a key component for business continuity through a common understanding of processes and behaviours.

ELA aims to provide an international forum for networking, promotion and development of the logistics and supply chain management profession.

ELA formulates European Logistics Standards and encourages the acceptance of these standards on an international basis. These Standards are the main product of ELA.

In this regard, the purpose of ELA of which CILT is a member, is the establishment and maintenance of a common content and standard of courses, examinations for professional qualifications and continued professional development in supply chain management and logistics.

ELA has over 27 national member associations; CILT has presence in more than 30 countries, connecting members across professional sectors to create range of benefits and opportunities in further career advancement through internationally recognized accreditation.

Standards

Reference

Network